

Contributor Guidelines

The Tri-Cities Area Journal of Business accepts columns and editorials from local professionals, educators and business leaders. Typical submissions range between 800 and 1,000 words.

While we do appreciate your interest in being published in the Tri-Cities Area Journal of Business, submission does not guarantee your contribution will be used. However, your piece is more likely to be accepted if you adhere to the following guidelines:

- Guest columns and editorials are not advertisements. Please do not include the name of your business or client names, and please do not attempt to sell a product or service your company or a client specializes in.
- Guest columns and editorials in the Tri-Cities Area Journal of Business are forums to share useful tips and knowledge with other Tri-Cities area business professionals. We encourage fresh, new insight on business topics. Since our readers are educated, simple submissions that focus on items that are considered common knowledge won't be published.
- Submissions are not the place to discuss awards, promotions or anything about the company you own, work for or represent. Please submit press releases for those types of items for possible inclusion here: www.tcjournal.biz/submit-news.
- We cannot publish every submission we receive. We will publish articles that best fit the mission and focus of our newspaper. If we do not use your submission right away, we may keep it on file for future use.
- We reserve the right to edit submissions for syntax, spelling, grammar, punctuation, clarity, length and questions of good taste or libel.
- Submissions must be original and exclusive to the Tri-Cities Area Journal of Business.
- Be sure to include a brief bio of yourself, including name, title and place of employment, education and community involvement. Also include a high-resolution JPEG headshot.
- Have fun with your writing so readers stay engaged and walk away with good tools to utilize in their lives.

Thank you for your interest in writing for the Tri-Cities Area Journal of Business.

Please email submissions to: news@tcjournal.biz